Jury Comments

First Prize | 55198

"The proposal is a creative demonstration of how tactical urbanism can be leveraged to improve the performance of transit infrastructure. Identifying the support towers of cable cars as nodes that the community is naturally drawn to, the proposal engages both the horizontal ground plane at the foot of these towers as well as the verticality of the towers to resourcefully 'produce' new public spaces for the community in dense land-strapped settlements. Programming these spaces with varied functions creates urban markers that also enhance the overall legibility of the settlement. The proposal's very real potential for replicability is also a winning aspect."

Vidhya Mohankumar - Urban Design Collective

"It creatively reimagines neglected spaces of the city proposing a new purpose. By introducing flexible interventions that can mute along time, the project not only enhances the surroundings but fosters socialization, potentially turning "no-places" into inclusive gathering spots."

Lucia V. Bocchimuzzi - MIC-HUB

Second Prize | 57219

"This project significantly reinterprets the conventional understanding of camouflage, employing a discreet yet politically sensitive approach to augment adaptability and flexibility within urban and societal contexts. Such initiatives occasionally necessitate compromise to reconcile mutual and conflicting interests in this city. The team exhibits commendable courage in showcasing the potential within a city marked by a prolonged history of crises."

Han Kuo - Supra-Simplicities

Third Prize | 55284

"This project cleverly touches on an out-of-a-box idea turning a park into a vibrant place during winter by helping people stay warm by staying active. Starting with a pilot phase to gather community feedback shows a smart approach to ensuring the project meets the needs of Lahti's diverse population and could be a great model for other Nordic cities to follow. It uniquely turns a park into a more urban space and creates opportunities to bring communities together by making cold more enjoyable."

Marta Nosowicz - Humankind

Jury Comments

Golden Mention | 53147

"By selecting the UNESCO heritage as site and employing a strategy of minimum intervention, the design articulates a narrative that explores the potential for achieving equilibrium between well-protected man-made space and the organic lushness of natural greenery. Through this approach, the project seeks to enhance the overall comfort and usability of the plaza space."

Han Kuo - Supra-Simplicities

Golden Mention | 53179

"Repurposing existing infrastructures is key to promoting sustainable interventions. By addressing also critical social issues such as food poverty, the project showcases the strength of adaptive solutions in fostering inclusive and healthy communities."

Lucía V. Bocchimuzzi - MIC-HUB

Golden Mention | 54737

"The thoughtful integration of mythical elements and practical urban solutions in the design not only revitalizes the space but also preserves the unique identity of Xochimilco, making it a model for culturally sensitive urban redevelopment. By introducing multifunctional alebrijes and new piers, the project promises to transform the way residents and visitors interact with the historic canals and chinampas, fostering a deeper connection with the natural landscape. The poster is beautifully designed."

Marta Nosowicz - Humankind

Golden Mention | 55033

"The project offers a thoughtful response to the Berlin overpass issue, prioritizing community involvement and adaptability. Its focus on reversing negative urban patterns and embracing an "Open City" concept aligns well with tactical urbanism principles."

Mattia Ciurnelli - SuperForma

Jury Comments

Golden Mention | 55617

"This project serves as a reminder of the ongoing struggle between humanity and viral pathogens. In densely populated urban space, physical confinement remains the most effective strategy for curtailing the spread. The proposal illustrates how urban confinement measures can significantly enhance quality of life during hypothetical extreme lockdown scenarios. Moreover, it underscores the imperative for cities to prepare for future pandemics, emphasizing the necessity of robust contingency planning and resilient infrastructure."

Han Kuo - Supra-Simplicities

Golden Mention | 56476

"London bridge arches occupation: well crafted and articulated urban acupuncture, seems a no-brainer. Clean and well presented solutions."

Michel Lauzon - LAAB Collective

Golden Mention | 56710

"Project HETEROTOPIA addresses the prevalent issue of unfinished public works with a tactical urbanism approach. Its focus on transforming neglected spaces into vibrant community hubs using adaptable interventions, while emphasizing community involvement, is highly commendable."

Mattia Ciurnelli - SuperForma

Golden Mention | 57505

"Nice idea with adaptable design and flexibility to street furniture"
